BY J. AUGUSTINE SIGNAIGO.

The noblest of that God-like hand Of Christian gentlemen, Who drew the sword for native land, Has passed the shadowy gien ; He is not dead, but gone before,

Our Chevalier Bayard! His soul to Heaven the angels born To mete him his reward He fell wleep in happy dreams, Virginia's noblest son,
Whilst basking in the hallowed glesims
Of glorious Washington.
And in that light above the storms

His warrior chiefe, immortal form Of Jackson and of Rill. His mortal form may pass to dust, But his undying name
Will mount the temple of the just,
The brightest star of fame;
For since in prayer at Calvary's cross,

Are seen beside him still.

. Our Lady best the knee. Larth has not felt such grievous loss As that of Robert Lee! It was not his Bozzaris fate, Who fell in war for Greece. Our glorious chief, the truly great,
